About Alzheimer's Society

Alzheimer's Society is the UK's leading support and research charity for people with dementia, their families, and carers. We provide information and support to people with any form of dementia and their carers through our services, publications, National Dementia Support Line, and local offices. We campaign for a better quality of life for people with dementia and a greater understanding of dementia. We also fund an innovative programme of medical and social research into the cause, cure, and prevention of dementia and the care people receive.

About the Memory Support Worker Team

The Memory Support Worker service was commissioned by Leeds Clinical Commissioning Groups and is delivered by a partnership between the Alzheimer's Society and Leeds and York Partnership (NHS) Foundation Trust. The service was set up in October 2015.

Our Memory Support Worker service was developed to provide personalised information, support, and advice to people with memory problems, their families and carers. This can include signposting to local services like our activity groups, and helping service users to strengthen existing support networks so that they can maintain their independence for as long as possible. The service we provide is flexible, but consist essentially of person-centred, helpful conversations and support.

We have 14 Memory Support Workers working around the Leeds area. We receive referrals from the Memory Service and other agencies, but we can also receive self-referrals.

The Memory Support Workers also work closely with local GP practice teams, the Memory Service team including occupational therapist, consultant psychiatrist, nurses and the Younger People with Dementia Team.

Do you have memory problems?

Our Memory Support Workers can help with:

- Information and advice for you (or the person you know) about memory problems.
- Family and carers support and details on how to contact services that could help.
- Be a contact person for people living at home with dementia/ memory problems and their family and carers.
- To help you to make informed choices about living well with dementia and other memory problems.
